Keynote Title: "The Psychological Effects of COVID-19 Pandemic"

Abstract: The Covid-19 pandemic has caused significant changes in everyone's lives. Especially with the social isolation process, people have moved their entire lives to their homes and nowadays people are trying to get used to new normal process. Because of the Pandemic these are strange, mysterious and challenging times all over the world. While we are waiting for the treatment of Covid -19 with great hope in this period when we are struggling with the pandemic, the importance of psychology and sociology is understood once again during this process. The insecurity and the uncertainty with Covid-19 and the returns of it such as major changes in the global economy, the rising unemployment levels also effect everyones' lives.

The psychological effects of the pandemic period were also observed on the relationship of family members who spend a long time in the same house due to social isolation period. And also the rising in the internet addiction is another output of this process. Innovations in education should not be forgotten, especially the transition to online education and the hybrid processes that develop with the new normal. These are just a few of the changes we've experienced. Now it is the time for adapting, connecting and helping each other because during the isolation period of the pandemic process we experienced the period of unity and solidarity intensely in every aspect of our lives.
